John, Sarah

S Sarah 00:00
Okay, so are you ready to dive into some seriously mind bending stuff today?

J John 00:04
Always up for a challenge, because

S Sarah 00:06
we are tackling the nature of reality itself. Sounds

J John 00:09
fun,

S Sarah 00:09
not just the reality we experience every day, but like the Grand universe and our place within it. And let me tell you, we've got some seriously mind bending concepts to unpack.

J John 00:21
I'm intrigued. It's kind of like imagine a cosmic ladder. With each rung you go up, it's a completely different level of existence. Ooh. I completely different level of existence. So, I

S Sarah 00:30
like that visual.

J John 00:31
And we're starting our climb from a pretty fascinating spot,

S Sarah 00:34
right? And our source material actually calls our current level. Get this incomplete, finites catchy. It sounds a bit technical, I know, but basically it just means we're all a work in progress, constantly evolving, still got some rough edges.

J John 00:47
Exactly, we're in beta testing all of us. I like that. And it's not just as humans, it's planets, it's stars, entire galaxies. They're all considered incomplete, finites at this point in, you know, the grand scheme of the universe's timeline.

S Sarah 01:01
So you're saying the universe itself is still under construction, in a way. Yeah,

J John 01:06
it's wild, right? It's

S Sarah 01:07
kind of humbling, isn't it?

J John 01:08
It is the source material even says that everything from like the tiniest particle to the largest supercluster, it's moving towards a state of light and life. It's, it's like this incredible journey of self discovery for the whole universe. Okay,

 Sarah 01:22

that's just wow. So for all evolving is there like an end point, like, what happens when an incomplete finite graduates? So to speak.

 John 01:31

That's where this other concept comes in, the concept of maximum finites. So imagine beings, or even entire universes that have reached their full potential, but like for this stage of the grand universe.

 Sarah 01:41

So like reaching the peak of a mountain, you've climbed to the top, you've taken in the view. What's next? Well, that's the thing, the source material. It suggests that even reaching that maximum level, it's just a stepping stone. It hints at something beyond our current understanding of I don't know how to even say it, beginnings and endings. Okay, you've officially piqued my curiosity. It gets wilder. This realm is called transcendentals. Transcendentals, all right, you're gonna have to hold my hand on this one. What does that even mean? Well, imagine a level of existence where, like our perception of time and space, even like cause and effect the way we experience it. It might not apply. Okay, you've officially lost me. It's like trying to explain the Internet to someone who's lived their whole life without, like, electricity, okay, okay, I get it. It's that different. Yeah. And

 John 01:47

 Sarah 02:07

 John 02:12

 Sarah 02:29

 John 02:31

the source material actually mentions this place, paradise of ONA, which is a realm that's, like, closely tied to the very source of creation, existing on this transcendental level.

Sarah 02:42

So we're talking about a reality so far beyond our comprehension that it essentially touches the face of creation itself. Pretty much, my head is officially spinning.

John 02:51

It's a lot to process. It really is. But this is where it gets even more interesting. The source material introduces this idea of God, the sevenfold, which acts as a kind of bridge between all these levels of reality. Wait, so there's like a divine force out there helping us bridge the gap between, what was it us incomplete, finites and those higher realms, like some cosmic elevator operator. You can think of it that way, but it's more than just transportation. It's more like God the sevenfold is described as a unifying force offering truth, beauty and goodness to every single personality in the universe, no matter how distant. Wow.

Sarah 03:03

John 03:12

Sarah 03:27

So even if you're way out there, like on some remote planet in a far off galaxy, you're still connected to this ultimate source. That's the idea that's actually pretty comforting when you think about it.

John 03:37

It really is. It's all about interconnectedness. It's woven throughout the source material, this beautiful sense of unity. Okay, I'm definitely feeling a sense of awe right now. So, if this God, the sevenfold, is the bridge, what can you tell us about what lies at the other side? Like, what's the nature of this ultimate source?

Sarah 03:44

John 03:55

Well, the source material actually gets pretty deep into the nature of God, describing a supreme being who, like, embodies the culmination of everything, everything evolving in time and space. Okay? And here's where it gets really interesting. It suggests that we actually play a part in this

S

Sarah 04:11

hold on. You're saying that our experiences, our choices, they all factor into this supreme being somehow. That's what it's indicating. Yeah, like, by experiencing, by growing, even by simply existing, we are contributing to this ultimate synthesis of reality. Whoa,

J

John 04:19

S

Sarah 04:28

okay, now that is mind blowing. So it's not just that we're evolving towards something, but that our very existence is part of something much, much bigger.

J

John 04:35

Exactly. It's this fascinating interplay between like, the personal and the cosmic right, and the source material emphasizes that this Supreme Being isn't some distant, you know, unknowable entity. It actually states that the Supreme Being is experientially attainable by individuals like you and me. Experientially attainable. Okay, that's a powerful phrase. So there's this incredible potential. For connection, for understanding, even on like a cosmic scale, exactly, and we're just scratching the surface here. Remember, we're still just on the second rung of this cosmic ladder, right? Just wait till we start exploring those higher realms of existence in the source material. It gets even more mind bending from here.

S

Sarah 04:55

J

John 05:03

S

Sarah 05:17

You're not kidding. This deep dive is already making my head spin. But you know me, always up for a challenge. Bring on those higher realms. All right, so I am strapped in and ready for these higher realms. You mentioned what kind of wild, like wild concepts are waiting for us on the next rung of this cosmic ladder of yours. Well,

J John 05:33
remember how we were talking about this journey towards, like, unifying with the I Am,

S Sarah 05:38
right, the ultimate source of everything. Exactly

J John 05:41
so to help us wrap our minds around that immensity, the source material brings up this really fascinating structure called trinities.

S Sarah 05:49
Trinities like Father Son and Holy Spirit. Is that what we're getting at? That's

J John 05:53
one way to think about it, yeah, but it actually gets even more expansive. It describes not just one Trinity, but multiple trinities, each one representing a different expression of Divine unity, and they each play a specific role in like, the grand scheme of things, the whole shebang. Okay,

S Sarah 06:11
multiple trinities. My brain is doing cosmic gymnastics right now. Can you can you give me an example, like, what's one of these trinities and what does it do?

J John 06:18
Okay, sure, let's take the ultimate Trinity. This one is all about driving transcendental development. Think of it like the evolutionary engine of reality. You know, as we know it. Remember those maximum finites we talked about, the ones who have reached like peak potential? Yeah,

S Sarah 06:35
they were about to graduate to a whole new level of existence, right? Well, the

J John 06:39

source material suggests that they actually become part of this ultimate Trinity, working alongside something called the architects of the master universe. Architects of the master universe. Okay, we are definitely not in Kansas anymore. So if I'm wrapping my head around this, right, if the paradise Trinity is like the source code of the universe, the ultimate Trinity is like the team of cosmic developers constantly like expanding the program and pushing the boundaries of what's possible.

S Sarah 06:48

J John 07:05

That's a fantastic analogy, and it really highlights how even after reaching incredible levels of development, the journey of evolution and service it continues. It's not about kicking back and relaxing once you hit a certain level, right? It's about using your understanding to contribute to the the ongoing growth of reality itself.

S Sarah 07:24

That's a pretty inspiring way to look at it. So you've got the source code and the development team. What about the big picture? Is there a Trinity for that too?

J John 07:31

There is the source material also points to the absolute Trinity, and this one is a bit tougher to grasp even for like the celestial beings it describes, but it seems to be focused on the ultimate unification of, well, of all things.

S Sarah 07:46

So if I'm following you, each of these trinities represents a different like a facet of this cosmic dance of existence, and they all connect back to that fundamental source, the I Am, precisely just as those higher levels of reality are interconnected. So too are these trinities. They're not like separate entities, but rather they're different expressions of the same fundamental force working in harmony to, you know, orchestrate the evolution of the grand universe.

J John 07:56

S Sarah 08:14

This is blowing my mind wide open, but like in a good way. Okay, so we've covered these incredible levels of existence, and these, these mind boggling trinities, but where does it all incredible levels of existence, and these, these mind boggling entities, but where does it all lead? Like, what's the end game of this whole cosmic journey? That's the million dollar question, isn't it? And the source material doesn't shy away from, like, the profound mystery of it all, ultimately, a point stored unification with the I am as, like, the ultimate goal.

J John 08:29

S Sarah 08:39

Okay, back to the I Am. We've been kind of circling around this idea of unification. But what does that actually mean? Like, what would it be like to achieve that kind of oneness with the source of all creation? Well, that's where things get really interesting. And the source material encourages us to, like, think beyond our typical understanding of individuality and even consciousness you know as we know it. So we're not talking about like uploading our consciousness to some cosmic mainframe, not exactly. Think of it more like a drop of water merging back into the ocean. The source material emphasizes that this I am isn't some kind of super being with a personality you know, that we could even comprehend. It's it's the fundamental essence from which everything emerges, a state of pure being that's beyond our current capacity to even imagine, okay, I'm trying to picture that a state of pure Being Beyond existence or non existence. I'm not gonna lie. I'm a little lost in the cosmic weeds here.

J John 08:51

S Sarah 09:03

J John 09:07

S Sarah 09:27

J John 09:36

That's understandable. It's a lot to wrap your head around, even for like those celestial beings that are described in the source material. But here's the encouraging part, the source material doesn't suggest that we need to like fully grasp the I am intellectually to even like embark on this journey of unification. It emphasizes that the journey itself is the point, this eternal striving to connect with the very. Course of our being. So even if we never fully like comprehend it with our limited human minds, the act of seeking that connection, that's what brings us closer to the I am exactly.

S

Sarah 10:00

J

John 10:08

It's about constantly expanding our understanding, pushing the boundaries of our perception, and embracing the mystery of it all.

S

Sarah 10:15

That's actually incredibly liberating when you think about it. It means there's always more to discover, always deeper levels of understanding to uncover. It's a journey without end, and that's that's a beautiful thing, absolutely. And while the source material acknowledges like the vastness of the cosmos, right? Yeah, and the profound nature of the I Am, it also emphasizes that this journey isn't some far off, unattainable goal. It suggests that that unification with the I Am is something that we can strive for right here, right now, in our everyday lives. Okay,

J

John 10:27

S

Sarah 10:48

I like where this is going. So how do we do that? How do we, as, quote, incomplete, finites, living in this material world, begin to connect with something so far beyond our like our understanding. That's where those core values we talked about earlier come in truth, beauty and goodness. So we've been talking about these core values of truth, beauty and goodness. How do those translate into actually connecting with the I Am? Like, is it about meditating for hours on end or becoming some kind of like ascetic monk?

J

John 10:59

S

Sarah 11:04

J John 11:19

That's a great question. And honestly, the source material suggests it's actually a lot more accessible than that. It's more about like, aligning our everyday lives with these values. Okay, so how do we do that? Think about it this way, every time you choose honesty over deception, you're aligning yourself with truth. Okay? Every time you take a second to appreciate the beauty of nature or art, you're connecting with that universal principle I see where you're going with this. And any act of kindness, no matter how small, it's an expression of that inherent goodness that flows from the I Am. So it's not about some like grand sweeping gesture, but more about making conscious choices, like in each moment, to reflect those values. That's actually really empowering, right?

S Sarah 11:51

J John 12:00

It takes this really abstract concept of, you know, unifying with the I Am, and it grounds it in the reality of our daily lives. It's like, Look, you don't have to be a perfect saint or a mystical master to embark on this journey, just, you know, just start by bringing more truth, beauty and goodness into your interactions with the world, like the world around you.

S Sarah 12:20

I love that. So as we strive to embody these values, as we like, deepen our connection with the I Am, what does that ultimately mean for our like, our journey through those levels of existence that we were exploring earlier? Do truth, beauty and goodness somehow, like, propel us up that cosmic ladder? That's where it gets really fascinating. The source material doesn't really lay out a rigid set of steps or a definitive timeline, you know, right? But he kind of suggests that as we align ourselves with these core values, as we deepen our connection to the I Am, our natural evolution towards those higher realms, it just kind of unfolds effortlessly. It's like we're removing the obstacles that were like preventing us from accessing those levels of reality that were always within reach.

J John 12:38

S Sarah 13:05

That's a powerful image. It's not about struggling to climb some ladder, but about, like, dissolving the barriers that were keeping us from recognizing our own, I don't know, like inherent connection to that higher reality. Precisely.

J John 13:16

It's about realizing that our true nature isn't separate from the I am, yeah, but, but rather like an expression of it. And as we come to that realization more fully, our experience of reality itself expands, we begin to see those connections to perceive, those deeper levels of existence that were always there just beyond our, you know, our limited awareness. This has been an incredible journey, and I feel like we've only just scratched the surface of this whole topic. Honestly, I'm already itching to, like, dive back into the source material and see what other you know, gems of wisdom we can uncover. Oh,

S Sarah 13:39

J John 13:52

I'm right there with you. It's the kind of material that every time you read it, you get new layers of meaning, like peeling back the petals of a cosmic flower to reveal the the infinite beauty at his heart. Speaking of infinite beauty, there's, there's one last point in the source material that I found particularly mind blowing. We've been talking about the I am as this ultimate source, this ground of being that exists beyond, you know, beyond time and space, right? Right? Well, if that's true, if the I am isn't bound by the same limitations as like our current understanding of reality. What if our journey of unification isn't just like a linear progression through time? What if in some way, we're already connected to that ultimate force, and this whole journey is about remembering that connection, about peeling back the layers of our limited perception to reveal that infinite reality that's always been present. Wow,

S Sarah 14:03

J John 14:16

S Sarah 14:41

that's a beautiful way to put it, and it really highlights the conadoxical nature of this whole journey. You know, we're striving towards something that, on a deeper level, we're already one with. It's, it's like we're setting sail to a destination we never truly left. That is truly a mind vending thought and one that I'll be pondering for a long time to come. Well, that wraps up. Our deep nod for today, we explored the nature of reality, the evolution of consciousness and and that ultimate goal of unifying with the I Am. It's been an incredible journey, and I hope our listeners are inspired to continue their own exploration of these like profound concepts, absolutely and remember, you don't need to have all the answers, right? You don't need to be a scholar or a mystic, just bring a sense of curiosity, an open heart and a willingness to see the world through the lens of truth, beauty and goodness. The rest, as they say, will unfold in its own time. Until next time, keep asking those big questions, keep searching for those deeper truths, and keep diving deep into the mysteries of the universe.

J John 15:09

S

Sarah 15:16
